

New partner joins boutique firm - The New Law Journal

By The New Law Journal - 30 June 2015

GQ Employment Law, the boutique employment law firm, has announced the appointment of a new partner, Daniel Pollard, from MacFarlanes. The firm now has a team of eleven lawyers, ranking its employment law capability alongside that of much larger Magic Circle and "silver circle" firms.

Daniel has fully rounded experience of employment law covering both contentious and non-contentious matters for financial institutions, corporates and LLPs. He has extensive experience in transactional M&A work, particularly in the financial services and LLP sectors, where GQ already has considerable strengths. In addition Daniel has expertise in data protection issues, particularly those relating to HR, plus he has an impressive track record of working with US clients which he gained during previous roles at the London offices of US law firms WilmerHale and Gibson Dunn & Crutcher.

To read the full article, click here.