

People Management

Firms reopening historic harassment cases in wake of #MeToo

People Management - 13 December 2018

The #MeToo movement peaked around 12 months ago, but if organisations thought they could look to the future, they could be in for a shock. New research suggests that a sizeable proportion of employers are revisiting historical cases of sexual harassment, in a trend experts warn shows no sign of slowing.

Please click here if you would like to read the full article.